MANY BOUTS STAGED ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Rowlands Defeats St. Paul Boy at Madison Bout—Kilbane Shaded by Patsy Brannigan.

New Year's afternoon and night were busy ones in Madison, with many bouts being staged. The Madison club opened up the season with a ten round mill between Len Rowlands and St. Paul boy, who was defeated by a majority decision. Patsy Brannigan, who was defeated by a majority decision, was knocked out by Young Wallace in the fourth round.

Governor Dunne issued notices of warning against boxing in the state of Illinois, and ordered bouts stopped that were scheduled at Ottawa and Peoria. The promoters failed to heed the warning, and as a result the principals and managers are in custody for the violation. "Mike" Snyder went ten fast rounds to a draw with "Goats" Diaz at Peoria. Now both are doing a couple of rounds behind the bars.

Young Ahearn, middleweight champion of Europe, outpointed Jack Dillon, six rounds, at Philadelphia. Ahearn danced around Dillon during the bout, making a poor fight for the fact.

McMahon, the Pittsburgh heavyweight, who bowed here, was trimmed by Al Norton in ten rounds of fighting at Kansas City.

Patsy Klein, the New York featherweight, outpointed K. O. Mars in twelve rounds at Columbus, Ohio. Klein hit Mars most at will, but Mars stood the punishment and was going strong at the finish.

"Cumbao" Smith and Battling Levinsky fought two poor rounds at Watertown, Connecticut.

Young Joe Slaguna, the eastern lightweight, has been signed to meet Ad Wolcott, ten rounds, in New York on the thirteenth.

Baseball fans all over the country are pulling for Johnny Evers to recover from his attack of pneumonia, and with good reason. The Boston Braves, of which Evers is captain and second baseman, are the most popular team baseball has produced for many a year. Fans like the Braves because of the way they went from the National league cellar to the world championship. They don't want to see anything happen that would bring disaster to George Stallings' team. Evers would be missed more than any other one player. He is one of the team's main inspirations as well as one of its best players and hustlers. It's unlikely the Braves could lose Evers and repeat. If good wishes count for anything, Evers will have a speedy recovery and be able to start next season as well as ever.

Boxing in California isn't going to die, it seems. James W. Coffroth, who has promoted a large share of the big fights in that state, can find means of keeping it alive. And James W. Coffroth has discovered a way to continue the existence of the game. At the last election California voters ratified an anti-light law. This was the death knell of boxing in California, according to everyone's belief. That is everyone except Coffroth. Coffroth says he is going to test the constitutionality of the anti-light law. Attorneys say he has a good chance of winning.

Condie Mack, according to his own statement, will not make any more chances in his club. At the time he sold Eddie Collins to the White Sox Mack intimated other chances were to come. However, he now says he will have enough work to do in finding pitchers to replace Bender and Plank and a second baseman to replace Collins. Condie is not saying anything about what player he has in mind for second base. Kopf and Orr filled in on the infield last season without displaying any class that would make them appear able to succeed Collins.

Eddie Collins came near never being a member of the Chicago White Sox because his wife refused to be a part of the biggest man in baseball wanted to see him. He was at the home of a friend when the telephone rang and Mrs. Collins replied: "Hello," said a voice. "This is President Johnson of the American League. I want to speak to Mr. Collins. We've had practical jokes call us up before," replied Mrs. Collins sweetly as she hung up the receiver. Five minutes later the telephone rang and Mrs. Collins replied: "This is President Johnson of the Chicago White Sox. I would like to speak to Mr. Collins." "Your friend, Mr. Johnson, must have lost his voice and asked you to call," responded Mrs. Collins and hung up again. Another five minutes passed. Then Condie Mack called up. Mrs. Collins recognized his voice and almost fainted when he told her that both Johnson and Comiskey had called.

Charley Brickett's first berth as a football coach probably will be at Penn State. Numerous colleges have made offers to the famous drop-kicker, but Penn State's proposition of a three-year contract at a fat salary is said to be the one Brickett takes the most seriously.

Heinie Wagner, former shortstop of the Boston Red Sox, who was out of the game all last season because of rheumatism in his right arm, hopes to play ball next year. His arms feel much better. Heinie will go to Hot Springs in February to start boiling out his arm.

It is not hard to discover athletic material at the University of Michigan.

According to the recent report of Intramural Director E. A. Rowe, 2,068 students are engaged in competition on chess teams or members of tournaments in minor sports. These figures do not include varsity athletes or members of the all-fresh and scrub teams in football, baseball, track and tennis. If these sports were considered, the total number of Michigan students engaged would run to 2,750 in round figures. Basketball attracts 440, baseball 359, football 337 and tennis 350.

White water, Jan. 2.—The Congregational church people varied their Christmas program this year. The usual program was held the Sunday afternoon before Christmas, and on Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week were the Christmas parties. In the afternoon the primary and grade roll had their party, to which the mothers were also invited. The little folks played games until the door was opened into the next room where there was a Christmas tree and Santa Claus waiting to distribute bags of pop corn and candy. In the meantime the mothers were served to cocoa and wafers. Later a short children's program was enjoyed by all. In the evening a large crowd of young people enjoyed the games and general good time. Father Time then made his appearance with a basket of good things which Santa Claus had left to distribute. A feature of both afternoon and evening party was for each one to bring something to give to someone who hadn't fared as well as they on Christmas, and a large amount was collected to be distributed on New Year's day.

Will Connie Mack weld another champion team? He's done it before with few stars; 'tis thought he can do so again.

Connie Mack's wonderful machine has been badly broken up, but critics believe the great baseball general stands a good chance of winning the American league pennant again next year. Evers and Bush probably will be his star twirlers in 1915. The rest of the lineup probably will be like this: Davies, left field; Strunk, center field; Thompson, right field; Baker, third base; Barry, shortstop; Murphy, second base; Schang, first base; McAvoy, catcher.

The rest of the lineup probably will be like this: Davies, left field; Strunk, center field; Thompson, right field; Baker, third base; Barry, shortstop; Murphy, second base; Schang, first base; McAvoy, catcher.

Connie Mack's wonderful machine has been badly broken up, but critics believe the great baseball general stands a good chance of winning the American league pennant again next year. Evers and Bush probably will be his star twirlers in 1915. ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT.

Neutrality. We dare not buy a hat from France. We dare not sing a Russian dance. We dare not sing a German Lied. We dare not praise a German deed. For we have many friends, you see, And must preserve neutrality.

We dare not praise Deutsch Kaiser Bill. No foaming wine of France dare spill In honor of a Gallic friend. But always ever must pretend We care not whose the victory— We must preserve neutrality.

When news comes hurling from the front That prizes some bold Allied stunt, Or tells of tentons in the van, Or doughty deeds of Austrian, We dare not weep nor shout with glee, For sake of our neutrality.

But some day, far down by the sea, With no one near and feeling free, We'll read the news and read our fill. Hurrah for France or Kaiser Will; We'll whoop her up for whom we please— To Halifax, neutralities!

As a Result of the War. One of the Michigan editors says: Last week we received an invitation to buy a bale of cotton. Say, the way things are going we'll be lucky if we can buy a spool of cotton. Gee! If we only had the nerve. What we couldn't do! Had we been born with the kind of nose people we know, here's what you would find in these pages from week to week:

"On account of the European war the subscription price of this paper has been raised to $5 a year, cash in advance."

"On account of the loss from import duties, advertising rates will be increased to 50 cents an inch. Effective at once."

"We are pained to announce that owing to the almost complete suspension of the importation of chemicals, obituary notices will cost you 10 cents a line hereafter."

"It being impossible to export prunes to Przemysl, notices of church suppers will be charged for at the rate of $5 each and two tickets to the supper."

"Resulting from the suspension of regular shipping facilities between this town and Gulf of Obigosh, all the pumpkins, apples, potatoes, corn, grapes, etc., brought to this office under the pretext of exhibition to the editor will be seized as contraband of war."

"All persons found owing this paper more than a year's subscription will be shot as spies."

The Solution. There is no use in fussing 'round about the price of coal. Or worrying about the thing and wearing out your soul. There is a way to dodge all that and never have to go to the coal mine. And with the man who sells the stuff blow in all your dough. You'll never have to go and see the coal man if you try This scheme which we propose to you for that's how we get by. If you would dodge the coal man absolutely, don your hat And then go out and sign a lease for one steam-heated flat.

Uncle Abner. The feller who lives on a corner lot certainly has a snap. He has to pay more taxes than the feller in the middle of the block and has to shovel twice as much snow. It is getting to be almost impossible to bust into society nowadays by buying a limousine and a three logged planer.

Old man Hicks says he has felt something hard like a collar button or a walnut under his foot for several days. He is going to take his foot boots off as soon as the weather warms up a bit and find out what it is.

Signs of the Times. Major Mitchell of New York will pose for the movies for the benefit of the Belgian sufferers. But haven't they suffered enough without that? Carlo says Paul de Cassagne was wounded at the front. Well, only a coward in ever wounded at the back. David Jayne Hill says Europe is terribly in earnest about this war. Marry! We thought they were only fooling.

Mexico should postpone her war until she can command more newspaper space.

The Young Turks really act more like geese.

The Red Cross society has secured 10,000,000 cigarettes for the soldiers. We

Uncle Sam Offers All Americans a Chance to Feed Starving Belgium

Arrangements Made For Sending Parcel Post Packages From Rural Districts. How to Aid the Stricken Little Sister of the World

By WILL IRWIN

HOMELESS BELGIAN WOMEN ON THE WAY TO THE BREAD LINE.

FOR the first time in its history the postoffice department has been enlisted in a charitable undertaking. From this time forth any American who wishes to give food to the starving people of Belgium has only to stamp his parcel in the regular way and send it through the parcel post. It will go as straight and fast as rail and water will carry it to the doors of the starving Belgians, and the money he has paid for stamps will be refunded to the donor by the American Commission For Relief In Belgium, the executive offices of which are at 71 Broadway, New York city. Seven million people, mostly women, children and old men, are still shut up in Belgium. Industry stopped when the Germans came; the money gave out through the payment of fines and indemnities; the crops were mainly ruined. With the costs cut off, Belgium, which imports three-quarters of her food supply in normal times, could import no more. Work is gone; money is gone; most important of all, food is gone. The German conquerors, who need all their own supplies to guard against the proposed "siege of Germany" by the allies, cannot and will not feed them. The allies, fearing that the Germans will seize any food coming from a hostile source, cannot or will not feed them. America must feed them or they will starve. There is no other way. Seven million people, until last year the most industrious, peaceable and prosperous nation in Europe, will go to their graves this winter unless America gives as never nation gave before.

While Belgium needs everything, she needs most of all just food—non-perishable food which will stand the test of ocean transportation, such as flour of any kind, peas, beans and preserved meats. The donor has only to put up his gift in packages of not less than twenty-five pounds nor more than fifty pounds, stamp it in the usual way and mail it at the nearest postoffice. If the donor adds his own name and address, TOGETHER WITH THE LETTER "R," the money he has paid for stamps will be refunded to him by the commission.

Package mailed from WISCONSIN should be addressed to ALL RAILROAD FREIGHT DEPOTS, MILWAUKEE, who are collecting agents for this district.

Von Kluck, General of the German Army. Find a German and a French soldier.

always thought it was the purpose of the Red Cross to save men and women from the ease with which General Villard though Germany will take Paris. It is winning his battles indicates that time to move it over and exhibit it he knows somebody who knows how at the San Francisco exposition.

At any rate, it doesn't look as if the Red Cross society has secured 10,000,000 cigarettes for the soldiers. We

"It is my principle to cut out individual play on the diamond," says Clarence Rowland, newly appointed manager of the Chicago White Sox. Anything rather than have them caught flat-footed."

So said a patient just now. He has been having his teeth extracted all these years. Instead of having them saved. Don't you neglect yours and come to the same place of misery through stomach trouble.

ARREST COLORED MAN ON AN ARSON CHARGE

Wanted in South Beloit by Authorities—Other Cases in Court This Morning.

Phil Reid, colored, who formerly worked for several Janesville families, was arrested by the police late Saturday morning, on complaint from South Beloit authorities, that he was wanted in connection with the alleged incendiary fire which destroyed the home of Nan Brown, also colored, in South Beloit, across the state line in Illinois, Wednesday night. Reid was taken to the jail in Janesville, where he was held on $1000 bail, and returned to face the charge. Considerable property, alleged to have been taken from the Brown home, which he had occupied and was taken back with him. The Brown woman, it is alleged, went to Chicago last Monday, taking considerable of her worldly goods with her. It is said that Reid left the house fifteen minutes before it burned.

William H. Johnson, Joseph, were in court this morning. The latter charged with being drunk and disorderly New Year's eve, and the son, resisting an officer who sought to take the older man to the city hall. The son was given ten days' probation to take the pledge and was released to the custody of his wife. While the young man pleaded not guilty and asked for an examination, which was set for January 6th.

John Hurmy of Washington, D. C., is an expert dancer and the more he drinks the better he thinks he dances. He was on his way to the hotel and stopped off between trains. He was arrested at the Grand hotel and pleaded guilty in court to being drunk. Friendly Fish.

A curious instance of the familiarity of fishes with human beings has been observed in Portland, Ore., at the United States barge office. The official boat is kept at the end of the wharf. Some time ago one of the boatmen began to notice a fish about eight inches long, and resembling a carp that seemed to wish to scrape acquaintance. The fish would come up to the top of the water whenever the man appeared, and did not seem to be at all afraid. After a time all the men got to know the fish, and began to take friends to see him. At first he might not be in sight, but he would very soon appear and frisk around near the surface. Once or twice he has come so close as to rub his nose against the boatman's hand, and the men are waiting further developments.

Entire Contents Are at All Times Accessible to the Luncher.

The advantage of the new lunch box, which is shown herewith, recently patented, is that the entire contents of the box are at all times accessible and available to the luncher. It is therefore not necessary to find some convenient and suitable place to spread out the contents in order to be in a position to gauge one's conduct in the matter of disposal of the food. Then, too, the various compartments are suited for the carriage of different kinds of food and for keeping pickles separated from the pie or preventing, some other such incongruous mingling of victuals. CHAPTER II.

"You are under arrest."

FAR away on the same dimly lit desert another man was seeking the same light. Thomas Gallon had realized that he was a murderer. What would happen to Ruth if he were convicted of killing his partner? This was the thought which drove him on—onward toward the little speck across the mesa. Cautious of the cactus, of the sagebrush, of the unmarked paths of the little gullies made by last year's rains, he tramped steadily onward, and as he did so there was formulated in his mind a plan not only to save the gold for his daughter, but to save her father's honor.

It is true of lights and ideals that the further you follow them the fainter they grow, and it was with astonishment that Thomas Gallon suddenly found himself in the street of Valle Vista.

There is a lot of silent influence in the mere sight of closed doors. Gallon looked down the street, and every door was closed except one. No hospitality. One single sign showed that law and order, always vigilant, held their sway. He staggered on toward the green light which marked the sheriff's office. In there he found an alert deputy.

"Who are you?"

"I am Gallon," he said firmly. "The outlaws have got my partner and nearly got me."

The deputy looked at him shrewdly a moment and seemed satisfied. An instant later he was on his feet, buckling on his belt and revolver, and in a second instant he had brushed his way past the old miner and was vaulting into what apparently was a vacant street. Gallon dimly heard his call. His one thought was to play his part to the end. Would these men find by accident his gold? A moment later a curtain on the saloon across the street was lowered and the door opened.

"What's the matter?" yelled a half-drunken fellow, reeling out.

"Matias is out again!" cried the deputy. "Get the sheriff. They have got this fellow's partner." Then he turned to Gallon authoritatively and said, "How much do you have?"

"Nothing," said Gallon. "We did not strike anything, but they thought we had."

But with a quick gesture the deputy grasped Gallon's wrist and opened his hand, disclosing a nugget. "Where did you get this?" he asked.

"The old man started down stupidly at that warm bit of gold. He had carried merely.

"Get your horses, boys," ordered the sheriff.

It was not but a few minutes until the posse, Gallon riding stolidly on an extra horse, was scampering through the streets toward the mountains, now absolutely dark, as the moon had set. Sheriff Hawkins was not aware that as they crossed a wash a panting, groaning man was crawling on his belly toward the solitary light which marked Valle Vista. Nor did Gallon, dumbly riding toward the darkness which hid the scene of his crime, realize that Wilkerson was within ten yards of him as they splashed through the stream.

Then suddenly appeared in the sky a spot of white, which spread until the muck of the night had turned to dusk.

"Well, thank God it's daylight," said the sheriff to Gallon. "I guess we can get your partner all right now." And even as he spoke the dusk suddenly became enlivened by the light of the sun rising in the east. The moment it struck the brass on his pony's bridle Gallon involuntarily reined in. Through his blistered lips he muttered: "Gold! Ruth!"

Inquiring eyes were turned on him. The sheriff shoved his horse over and asked, "What gold?"

At the same instant came the deputy on the other side of him.

"Say, chief, he says there was no gold."

A sneaky arm reached out and took Gallon's gun away from him. "I think I better keep this," said the sheriff, his dark countenance growing stern.

So this cavalcade made its way through the fresh California dawn until there was a sudden break in the mesa. The deputy threw out his hand. "There are a hundred gulches in these mountains. Which one is it, pardner?"

At the word "pardner" Gallon pulled himself together. The glitter of the brass on the horse's headstall and that word. Should he tell them the location of that gulch? The stroke of one horse's hoof might disclose the mother lode, and yet he had told them the outlaws had killed Wilkerson.

His horse stumbled and threw him. When he got up he gropingly pointed his hands toward the hills and muttered, "That way, boys—that's where they got him."

Half an hour later the posse was grouped about the dead fire, and the sheriff was staring at a blood stained blanket.

"There has been trouble," he said abruptly. Then he turned on Gallon.

"Why is this coffee hot?" he said, lifting up the pot. The brusque tones of the sheriff cut the silence that followed.

"I don't see your man. I don't understand this. You are under arrest—for the murder of"—He looked at Gallon, and the old man involuntarily said, "Wilkerson."

All day the sheriff, with Gallon, his arms pinioned behind him, searched the gulches and gulches for the man whose blood stained blanket they had found. The old man, taciturn as ever, merely said, as if repeating by rote, "The outlaws got him."

When the full moon had risen and the night life of the desert had begun, grotesque life, built of sleeping forms and bizarre shadows, the sheriff called a halt up the canyon.

On one side of the gulley on which they were camped the sheriff's men had built a fire. It was against a rock, which rose whitely under the moon. Gallon saw his chance. He worked his way to the fire and in spite of the pain held his hands out over the blaze until he felt the strands of the rope weaken and finally part.

A moment later he was making his way to where the horses were tied. He leaped upon the nearest one and within a second was on his way down the hill into the mist which filled the valley.

But the noise of his horse's hoofs on the rough shale of the hillside awakened the guard.

"I think I will have a cup of coffee," he said to himself sleepily and sluggishly stretched himself. A moment later he hung the empty coffee pot into the darkness. "Sheriff," he cried, "he's gone!"

The sheriff lifted his lanky form as if by a single movement. "Who's gone?" he yelled.

"That man, Gallon," replied the guard.

"We must get him, boys!" the sheriff said. They rode to the edge of the hill and looked down into an iridescent sea of mist, a mere pool of curdling moonshine.

"He's got away from us, boys," said the sheriff. "We'll never find him there."

Gallon rode quickly on, no longer seeking for a light, but for darkness, and yet as he felt the pony quiver under him he himself felt a strange tremor—Wilkerson was still alive—somewhere behind that veil was his enemy and the man who knew the location of the richest mine in all golden California.

Mission Street pier marks the point on the San Francisco water front where sooner or later every one in this world passes, and among the multitudes straggled, subdued and unshodded by the tremendous forces which make our civilization, Gallon found himself absolutely unobserved in this throng—he was as he hoped to be. Bathed at the pier was a steamship, quartermasters on the gangway, and a sign hung on the rail saying, "We sail at 9:45 p. m."

When he reached his cabin Gallon stealthily took out from his pocket a folded paper and looked at it. He laid it on the white covering of the bunk and once more dipped into his jacket.

This time it was the picture of a girl. "I will save it for you," he murmured to himself. The bare room held but one movable article of furniture—a chest of strange workmanship and redolent of alien lands. Gallon stooped over and pulled at the lid. It came open to his touch, and he saw then a strange conglomeration of articles. An old lay there, inanimate, but important. He picked it up, and as he did so one of his coral eyes fell out.

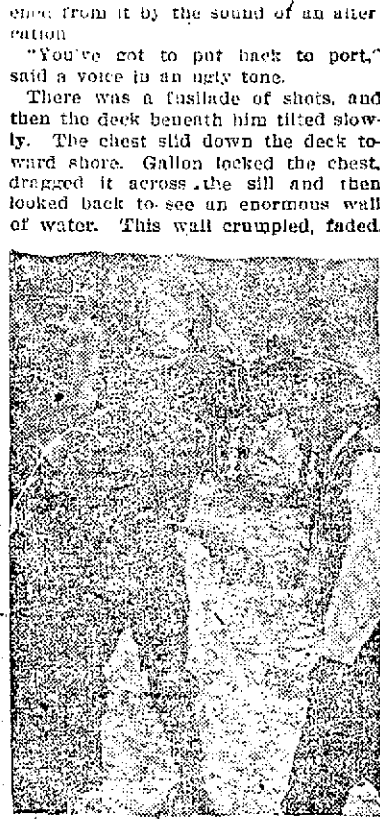

To him it was a sinister omen, and he stared for a moment, clenching at his breast. Then he gave way to the hysteria of the hunted and the haunted.

"I don't know whose god you are," he muttered, "but if you must have it—take it." And into the open socket he thrust the paper that held the secret of his mine.

It was a shot which is like a shot in the heart overtook Gallon before the Santa Cruz was well to sea. He was awaked from it by the sound of an altercation.

"You're not to put back to port," said a voice in an ugly tone.

There was a fusillade of shots, and then the deck beneath him tilted slowly. The chest slid down the deck toward shore. Gallon looked the chest, dragged it across the sill and then looked back to see an enormous wall of water. This wall crumpled, faded,

"You are under arrest—for the murder of"— yet left him breathless. What was the matter? Then he saw huge columns of smoke pouring out from the after part of the ship. It was not the formidable and avenging sea, but fire. He saw the boats go over the side. He saw two men struggling in the tops—yet it was a dream. His consciousness held but two facts—one the chest that contained the secret of his mine, the other the key that had locked within that strange and alien depository the picture of a little girl.

Six hours later a heavy sea drove a piece of wreckage up the crumbling beach beneath a cliff on the Oregon shore. On it was a man—brine drenched, almost unconscious, but still able to crawl beyond the reach of the finger breakers, clutching a key. It was Thomas Gallon.

He sat down and stared at the burning ship he had left. Dimly he remembered those strange numbers that marked the position of that vessel flaring to destruction far out on the horizon.

But how to remember them? How to keep this precious information in his head. His groping fingers found the key. A moment later he was scratching the numbers on his soft surface.

"This," he said through his salt parched lips, "is the master key." He stared up at the blue sky, and then bowed his head in utter weakness.

"If Wilkerson is alive, he knows. Every day is the same. When can I find the secret of 'The Master Key'?"

Thomas Gallon then picked up his letter file and duly looked over its contents.

"Funny," he thought to himself, "that that engineer that I wrote to Drake about has not turned up." He fumbled the letter uncertainly, but the name caught his eye—John Dorr.

At that very moment the motor stage chugged slowly into camp, and a tall, heavily built man swung down into the street, suit case in hand. He looked about him with a trained eye. He saw the opening of a mine upon the hill—the treadle crawling toward the dump, the pump house—all the paraphernalia of an active mine, but he also perceived that the stamp mill was silent.

"I'll bet they've lost the lode!" he thought to himself. He turned to a miner who was passing and asked, "Where is Mr. Gallon?"

"Up there in that bungalow," was the reply.

John Dorr straightened himself up and went quietly up the activity, until he finally arrived before a typical California bungalow. To his great astonishment a slender, fair haired girl confronted him. Instead of the brusque, rude miner he had been led to expect he would meet on his arrival at "The Master Key."

"I'm John Dorr," he said awkwardly. "I came to see Mr. Gallon. I am the new mining engineer."

Ruth looked at him critically. He was nothing like the men she was used to. His clothes were good. He fairly breathed soap and water, and his very apparent strength glowed beneath a clear, smooth skin and well proportioned limbs. Then she met his eyes in frank admiration.

"I'll call father," she said, but she still hesitated. That gentle pause brought the blood to John Dorr's face. He realized that this was a moment he would always remember.

Making Love to Garden Roller. It was a British income tax collector who said that the defeat of his occupation was that it gave you a low opinion of the honesty of mankind. So, writes a correspondent, the possession of a new garden roller has given an acquaintance of mine a cynical view of humanity. As I stood by him in his garden I noticed the number of persons who greeted him as they passed. "Lot of friends you have round here," I said. "Lot of people want my roller," he replied. "It's enough to make a man sick to hear the way people come and compliment me on my garden and then work round to a request for the loan of my roller." I suppressed a compliment regarding his vicar, adds the correspondent, lest he should suspect that I also was on the roller hunt.

Through the want ad columns of a daily paper, last week, a baby changed hands. This is no fairy tale! This is fact!

The little child's mother had died, his father was a stranger in our land. He could not take his child back to his people in his native land, and he could not care for it here, as he would wish to. He begged the hospital manager to help him, with the result that his little son is now the son of a doctor and his wife—who had everything save the thing that their hearts most desire. The father has gone to help his country in what he terms a just cause. The want ad pages are makers of history, on a small scale. Is it always on a small scale?

PHILIPP TO TACKLE JOB SINGLE-HANDED

POSSIBILITIES FOR SUCCESS AS GOVERNOR LIE IN HIS ABIL-ITY AND SINCERITY.

A CLEAN CUT PROGRAM

Reduction of State Expenditures Will Be Uphill Work, But Citizens
Expect Its Accomplish-

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, Jan. 2.—The beginning of the new year will witness some changes that will naturally attract attention beyond the limits of the state. Politics have been characterized by some bitterness, and epithets have been so common among members of the same political party, that there are, unquestionably, many republicans in Wisconsin who will shrewdly look upon the induction into office of Governor Philipp, next Monday, as a great step backward.

On the other extreme there is a class of conservative republicans who seem to regard the individuals of the other wing of the party as their personal enemies, and who are anxious to see Philipp as their opportunity for revenge. As usual in such cases, the welfare of the state lies somewhere between these extremes. Both extremes represent the "has-beens" of politics. Mr. La Follette's wing of the party is no more up to date than the element it delights to call "Stalwart" in terms of fancied opprobrium. The leaders are all in both factions, past middle age, and there is a new generation on the carpet who know and care for neither. The boy, for example, who began to vote eight years ago, never in his life attended a caucus, a convention, and he and his kind, who have been coming onto the carpet since 1906, are in voting majority in Wisconsin today.

Philipp's Qualifications. Under the circumstances it is fortunate that Governor Philipp is a man of good digestion, good temper, and free from petty spite and personal bias. He has no real enemies, and he is firmly believing anxious to do his best for the welfare of Wisconsin. He ought to be a man of a hair breadth and at least the tolerant good wishes of all good citizens. He knows that Mr. Philipp's ideas of government are deeply colored by the ancient high tariff cult of the republican party, with which I do not at all agree, but I do not believe it will seriously affect a practical job that he can assist in, namely, the reduction of taxes and the paring of expenses in this state. The possibilities in this direction if any lie in Mr. Philipp's ability and sincerity. No other state officer has his commission from the people, and a large proportion of the legislative elect, are either in some degree responsible for existing conditions, or they are, negatively at least, looking out for themselves and their own political prospects. Mr. Philipp is not going to have much help from any official source. His help to be of the least quality, should come directly from the people. At this writing, I know, however, of only two powerful friends who will surely stand by him stoutly. One is Hard Times. The other is High Taxes. They will be "good jobs" with him and both will get to all the people before adjournment of the legislature. It is a good omen to have many personal friends and it is expected that this year a new party will be the notable distinction of the special train that will go to Madison from here, bearing the governor and his escort, on Monday.

Much Christmas Charity. In the history of Milwaukee there has never been a more generous and warm-blooded outpouring of private bounty than was seen on Christmas. It took all shapes from the personal effort to organized association work. One case was particularly striking, not only for the broad-gauged way in which the thing was done, but in illustration it furnished of the rapid shifting of Fortune's conditions in this land of ours. The Saxe Brothers, who ten years ago, when I moved into this office, painted my name on the door, and were good and well off, since made a fortune in movies. Among their investments is a luncheon room, and on Christmas they fed everybody who came, from morning until 8 p. m., when the food was out, without money and without price. At 8 o'clock they took a bunch of strangers who were waiting to another luncheon room than their own, and fed them, all the while, and 9,000 people, bountifully and well. That certainly was a good stunt.

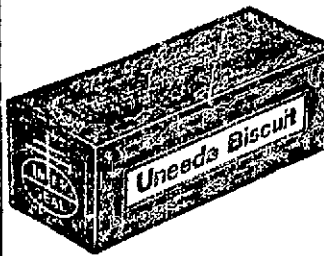

The thing that will help, and that I hope the prosperity boomers can push along, is to have some of the manufacturing and mercantile owners of the idle workmen. The next few weeks will tell whether there is to be any considerable rally in large business before spring. It will be decided better to close up the cap for the great industries, iron, steel, lumber, copper and cotton, have all been at a low ebb.

More About Taxes. It has just been announced that the state income taxes to be collected this year aggregate $3,140,571.88. The steam railroad taxes will also be about $4,000,000. These taxes are not much greater than the entire cost of running all state departments and institutions in 1900. Now the two combined pay about half our state expenses. It is a habit with those who talk about "state taxes," not to emphasize either of these, nor the inheritance tax, nor the insurance taxes, nor the automobile licenses, nor the taxes on electric railroads, nor the taxes on telephones, nor a host of other items in the nature of special taxes or occupations. Ever the taxes for common schools, according to the announcement made last week, have increased in ten years, going from $1,088,935.63 in 1905, to $2,321,758.54 this year. Meanwhile school population has increased about 50 per cent, less than 25,000. Getting ready.

Advertisement. The business of the Erie Railroad Company, in Wisconsin, made a new record for 1914, although it was a year that made the railroad people, as well as everybody else, bump themselves for business. It is especially gratifying to the hard working general agent, Harvey D. Pheasant, because some other people have been cutting down in Wisconsin, and there is no doubt but his good work and that of his assistants has counted, largely. It isn't all pie for the eastern roads, even the Erie, these days, so it is evident that it is making friends in Wisconsin territory. Incidentally, and sub rosa, Harvey says that the paragraphs every week in this letter, help. He meets me time he is out, and he tells him that they read them, and that is what they are published for. As a case of successful publicity, I point my other customers to the Erie. It is an interesting demonstration of the value of persistent talk. The point, for the railroad that is trying its best to give good service, and has a management that sets a high standard for itself. The Erie does things that are out of the run. For example, every employee of the road, big and little, got notice the day before Christmas, that he could make a sight draft on the treasurer in New York, for his December salary. It was a way of saying "Merry Christmas," that was big hearted. It meant pay day at least two weeks earlier than usual to most everybody.

Railroad Commission Changes.

The probability that Commissioner Roemer will soon leave and that Commissioner Harlow's time will soon expire, will give Governor Philipp the opportunity to name a majority of the members of the State Railroad Commission very early in his official career. There's a rumor that he is looking for a capable railroad man for one position and a good lawyer for the other. There is one thing that people generally do not seem to appreciate as to such important positions, and that Mr. Roemer illustrates. He leaves the commission to take a place in a law firm in Chicago, that specializes in public utilities practice, and will, probably, get a good salary. The financial reward that he has had from the public. The men who sit upon commissions of this character have before them, constantly, the highest paid legal talent in the country, and to have thoroughly competent commissioners means that the state must pay more. As a rule the men that reach such positions are not looking for a $5,000 job. So far Wisconsin has been fortunate, but the men who are fit for such important public service can not always be expected to serve the public at a personal sacrifice.

A New Year's Suggestion.

In starting the New Year don't "have off" and don't make a lot of rash and immature resolutions. It's much better to treat your expensive bad habits as the old negro woman did her husband's chickens. As Elder Washington tells the story: "Uncle Rastus said, 'last night I had bad luck. I was away and I let a male woman do de chors, an' she done forgot to close de chicken house door and de chickens all went home.'"

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The two following recipes are contributed by George McLean for the benefit of Gazette's readers. McLean has used them and recommended them in many cases with great satisfaction.

The Way to Make an Egg Nog Which You Will Not Tired Of.

One teaspoonful of good Jamaica rum in tumbler, add yolk of one egg, beat yolk and rum well; fill glass with good milk; add one teaspoonful cane sugar; stir all together. Person can take three or four each day, and enjoy them. The white of an egg has no food value and its use in egg nog is a detriment. The weakest stomach can stand the recipe as given here.

A Sure Dysentery Cure.

George McLean's home recipe never known to fail. Mr. McLean declares his experience with the formula has been infallible.

One quart of tablespoon of laundry starch into a tumbler of good milk; stir until well dissolved; add two tablespoons of blackberry brandy; stir all together well and take tumbler full every three hours until cured. It takes the place of food and will produce results where everything else fails. It can be used as well for animals as human beings.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married nearly a month and have never met my husband's father and mother. My husband says it is proper for me to go to his people's house and make their acquaintance and I say that they should come to our house first. Please tell me which of us is right.

MRS. W. Technically you are right, as you are the new-comer in the family, but my point is not much insisted on and fully as many brides-to-be and husbands-to-be as are called on by his parents. If my husband wanted me to go to call on his people I should certainly do it, if I were you, to show him I was ready in every way to do a wife's part. There may be many reasons why his parents cannot come to see you without great inconvenience. At any rate a wife is always the gainer if she manifests a friendly spirit to the husband's people.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man of twenty-four. I am the only support of my mother and sister. I met not long ago a young lady and I know I could love her very much, but I have never called on her or paid her any attention, as I am not earning enough to support two families. What would you advise me to do—avoid society entirely?

Certainly not. That is not a normal or happy existence. I am sure there must be some arrangement that could be made so that it would be possible for you to marry. How old is your sister? Will you be a self-supporting and then by helping her the two could live together or you could have the mother in your home and could marry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can you give me a recipe for hoarhound candy to use for a cough? A. M. Sleep a heaping tablespoon of dried hoarhound leaves in one cup of boiling water for one hour. Strain through cloth and add two cups of brown sugar. Stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved, then add one tablespoon vinegar and boil until a spoonful tested in cold water proves to be brittle. Drop in spoonfuls on a well buttered pan. Hoarhound candy is not a cough cure, it merely soothes the irritation of the throat.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please give me a formula for making sachet powder. M. F. R. This is one of the choicest formulas: One ounce each of coriander, rose leaves and aromatic calamus; two ounces lavender flowers, five grains musk. A cheaper powder consists of equal parts of orris root and cassia flowers. To make sachet powder, mix wood, cloves, oil of lavender or bergamot and cedar wood are other aromatic ingredients which can be added if desired.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two college girls in a co-educational institution. We have seen several very attractive young men and they seem to like us too. It is difficult to make natural friends to introduce us. Is there any way we can become acquainted without an introduction? TWO MAIDS AT SCHOOL. My dear girls, don't you know that it is generally possible for a young man to find someone to introduce him if he really cares about making a girl's acquaintance? I am afraid your college work is suffering, as the boys must be spending more time on your books. You were sent to school to study, not to cast longing eyes on attractive young men. If you really get to know them, you will not be as uneasy and discontented.

The Wife's Money

"Gaston, if you are determined to go, I will sell the cattle father gave me to help you get the money to go with," said his wife. "But it does seem as if after all father has done for us, you might be a little more particular with him," and pretty Mrs. Young laid her hand on the arm of her broad-shouldered young fellow, who stood with his hands deep in his pockets. "I tell you, Marcia, you can't father and I can't be friends while we are side by side. I am grown up and I treat me like a boy. He finds fault with every little thing I do. I am afraid he will get such an active devil at work in me that I'll be mean and unreasonable to my little wife, and he swept her off her feet into his strong arms. This morning he went away together into the broad world. I can support my wife. I am sure of that if I can get a start, and the cattle would give it to me. I'll pay it back every cent, just as soon as I can."

"I'll go where you want me to go," she said, laying her head against the shaggy coat.

So it was settled. The cattle were sent for later, and an automobile stage route was bought, running between Owanee and Ladora. The purchase included the automobile and gas, and the wife was to be paid for a while all went well with the stage business. There were plenty of tourists to carry and the free life in the open just suited the high spirited young man. One night they were awakened by a wild cry and a woman's scream. "It's the gasoline," he gasped, and seizing his baton he dashed down the stairs.

The gasoline had been stored behind a hill, near the house, and was so isolated that nothing else was damaged. "The gasoline," said Gaston gloomily when he returned. "I paid out nearly all I had on hand for that only a few days ago. I can't think what I'll do. I may have to get more."

"Can't you send your folks for money, dear? They never have done anything for you since you left home," suggested his wife. "I suppose so, but I hate to most awfully," he answered.

But there was no other way out and the money was borrowed. By the time that debt was paid and the living expenses, and a big bill for the gasoline and general repairs, the pocket book was empty again. Then the travel began to drop off and the landlord raised the price of their board to help him come out even. Just at this time a traveler came to the house who was so anxious to reach Laguna that night, that he offered Gaston $20 to take him over. It was a long run; to go and return would take six hours and the roads were up to the mountains. The lights were put out and his machine was disabled. There was nothing for it but to wait for daylight, when morning revealed the extent of the damage it confirmed Gaston in his resolution, reached in the night, to own himself defeated and go back to the farm.

So it was settled. The cattle were sent for later, and an automobile stage route was bought, running between Owanee and Ladora. The purchase included the automobile and gas, and the wife was to be paid for a while all went well with the stage business. There were plenty of tourists to carry and the free life in the open just suited the high spirited young man. One night they were awakened by a wild cry and a woman's scream. EVEN WOMEN'S WEAR IS WAR FASHIONED

Grecian Effects are Often Seen Aiding Women to Imitate Ancient Wardrobe. (By Margaret Mason.)

By day time she's Russian And rushing always, Or skitish and British In Atkins array She's Greek to you nightly Or Turkish delight All flimsy and slinky With spangles bedight.

But though the dresses Polly got Are all a little plotlyot I quite assure you Polly's not. She's white all right True blue always. Well read well bred In U. S. A.

New York, Jan. 2.—It's indeed an impossibility to assume an attitude of strict neutrality when it comes to one's wardrobe. No matter what your mental state your sartorial state must either be Russian or English when you pick out your new Spring suit for 1915. The only concession to neutrality is in tone for they are all shown in the neutral shade of Khaki. There is bound to be a decided leaning toward the British for the Tommy Atkins suits even from Khaki covert cloth are quite the choicest and sassiest little garments imaginable.

As well as can be judged from these very early 1915 models the Russian hare promises to stick by us if not close to us and the hare seems also to have rushed to midways head in an astonishing manner to lead from her heels. The Russian actually bowed or bowed slightly around their edges to make them stand out in the approved mode of the moment. These new flaring veils are all of the flimsy mesh face veil patterns and are worn only with the tiny brimless hats. They extend down to the shoulders with a slight dip behind and some are finished with a band of gross grained ribbon.

Grecian effects are seen more and more plentifully at the opera or ball. The flowing lines and soft draperies of these ancient modes lend themselves beautifully to the needs of the beauties of today. So prevalent are the fashions of old Greece becoming that Greek meets Greek more frequently than anything else these nights.

One lovely movement model is of mole color velvet hanging straight from the square cut out neck. A wide band of moleskin hangs the flaring short skirt and forms a flaring collar at the back of the neck. An odd feature are the cuffs of moleskin which do not finish the long tight sleeves at the hand but are set up about three inches above the wrist. From the neck down to the wrist, or where the waist would be if there were any is an elaborate embroidered design in dull silver. A grille of loosely woven fine dull silver is finished with two silver tassels each side to break the long line of the gown a trifle and a bright touch of color is lent by a bunch of scarlet velvet strawberries at the collar.

Of course high boots with mole cloth tops are worn with this costume and a perky little three cornered moleskin hat with a band of the dull silver around the crown and a bunch of the velvet fruit hanging near the front of the tiny brim.

Test Aeroplane Armor. One of the requirements of the American government for scout aeroplanes is that armor of chrome-steel one tenth of an inch thick must be carried to safeguard the engine and aviators. This armor is tested for penetration by the American ordnance department before being placed on the machine.

BUSY WITH RELIEF WORK IN ENGLAND

Lady Northcliffe, the American wife of the biggest newspaper man in England, has charge of the Anglo-American ambulance fund. This fund is used in supplying motor buses for the army. Three hundred of these buses are destroyed or put out of commission every week. They are used in carrying ammunition to the firing lines.

The Walk of the Church

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D.D. Director of Bible Course Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—"One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." Ephesians 4:6.

The Epistle to the Ephesians falls into two divisions: The High Calling and Glory of the Church (ch. 1-3), and The Practical Walk of the Church in View of this High Calling (ch. 4-6). We are now considering the second division, which may be summed up in three ways: First, the walk of the church, which should be characterized by unity (4:1-16); second, the walk of the individual Christian, which should be a walk of purity (4:17-5:21); third, the walk of the family, which should be characterized by loving submission and service (5:22-6:9). The difference between the two main divisions of this epistle may be stated thus: In the first, the church is presented as an organism which God alone sees; in the second, the church is set forth as an organization such as God would have the world see.

Looking now for a moment at the church as characterized by unity, we notice three trios of unities. First there are those specific virtues which secure and maintain the peace and unity of the church: they are lowliness, meekness, long-suffering and forbearance, and love.

The lowly man is one who is not always clamoring for his rights but is willing at times and where occasion requires to yield those rights for the welfare of others; he is, in other words, the man of humble and lowly spirit. Where this spirit is found in any church, unity prevails; its absence means friction.

The meek man is the man who thinks as little of his personal claims as the humble man does of his personal merits; he gladly gives place to others and is willing to take the lowest room. How many seeds of strife and roots of bitterness would be destroyed if this mind were in us all. Self-importance and love of office, and a craving for applause and leading places, mar the unity and peace of the church.

The long-suffering man is he who is not harsh or censorious or impatient in his dealings with those who are weaker than himself and who have not yet reached his attainment. He is forbearing with the weaknesses and faults of others and does not cease to love or interest himself in his neighbor, even though he has faults and weaknesses.

There is next presented to us those fundamental unities on which the unity of the church is based, namely, one body, one spirit, one hope; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God over all, through all, in all.

The church is one body. This is the teaching of Scripture. At the time of his conversion every believer was baptized by the holy spirit into the body of Jesus Christ. One spirit, the holy spirit, permeates all its members. Indeed, only spirit-quickened men belong to the real church which is the body of Jesus Christ. There is one hope of our calling, that is, friendship with Christ who is the one object and in action of our hope; one object, to realize, likeness to Christ; one prize to win, the crown of life. Are we not going to the same heaven, and looking for the same Lord? The oneness of aim of believers makes unity and fellowship a glorious reality. Then the church is in reality one. There may be many denominations, yet one body; many stars, and one star differing from another in glory, yet one radiant sky; many regiments, each its own uniform and colors, but one great army; many folds, but one flock; many creeds, but one faith; many accents, but one common language; many ways of doing things, but one motive.

Pleasant Fields of Holy Writ

Save for my daily range Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ I might despair. —Tennyson. The International Sunday-School Lesson.

Motto for this Week: The Scriptures teach us the best way of living, the noblest way of suffering, and the most comfortable way of dying. —John Flavel, 1633-1691. First Quarter Lesson. Judges 2. 7-15. January 3, 1915.

God's Patience With Israel (The Story.) A new generation had come upon the scene in the providential evolution of the Hebrew nation—a generation to which the splendid, exemplary, persuasive, and authoritative influence of Joshua did not extend, one to whom the supernatural victories of the fathers and the wilderness were already as much of a legend as our Civil War is to the boy of today.

This generation was annoyed by the fact that their fathers had failed to uphold. The Lord intended that the last bitter and poisonous root of polytheism should be torn out of the soil of Canaan and cast beyond its boundaries, in order that there, as in a favored garden, might flourish the fish to the good of all the nations of the earth. But God's people did not carry out God's plan. They were swayed from it by motives of policy. They loved success, they wished to remain for revenue. They said, We can not utterly exterminate heathenism, so let us license or tax it. They reasoned, "Live heathens as slaves to the Lord, and we shall have them to remain for revenue. They said, We can not spend all our time throwing down altars; we must throw up walls and towers to hold them. We have conquered. Their thought was, It is a question of the shortest possible time when they would form alliances, first commercial, then marital, with these remnants of heathen populations.

Then began the effort, philosophical and eternally unending, to serve God and mammon. At the very inception of this evil, the Lord sent his messenger. Skillfully and compassionately he blocked Israel in its fatal descent. The very place whence the messenger came added sanctity to his person and significance to his message. Gilead—what a name to conjure by—that was the historical birthplace of Israel's Canaan. There stood the calm memorial of God's victory through Jordan. There the Passover and circumcision had been revived after forty years of banishment. The place where the messenger appeared before the general assembly of Israel was equally significant—Shiloh, where the ark behind the curtain walls radiated the background of God's faithfulness, which did not permit a syllable of the covenant which he had confirmed with an oath to fail—on the background of Israel's black infidelity was made to stand out stereoscopically. The national conscience pleaded guilty to the indictment, "Ye have not obeyed my voice." It awaits the infliction of penalty. The scene is strong, companion, lamentation, and tears. But it seems to have all ended in an emotional ruffe. No one cried, "Down with the idols!" "Out with the heathen!" With a better, purer sentiment, they called the spot "The place of tears." Crucial moment, that, in Israel's history! O, for the lion heart of a Caleb or a Joshua! Instead of a sorrowful muttering, "been averted!" As if reminded of the nation's lack of courageous leadership, the chronicler throws in his historical parenthesis, recording the bold butchery of the prophet. He follows an account of the inevitable sequence. The heaven of idolatry leavened the whole lump. Jehovah, spite of his ineffable self, spite of his glorious providential dealings with Israel, is forsaken. The children of those who had heard the awe-inspiring voice of Sinai saying, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," were now bowing to the light god and the star goddess. For the ritual, with all its lovely, significant, and uplifting symbolism, speaking of the unity, spirituality, and holiness of God, and showing forth a fascinating object lesson on the lofty possibilities of the human soul, there was substituted the cruel and bloody rites of Baal, the lascivious dance and prostitution of Ashtoreth. The black gloom of this descent to heathenism is deepened by those self-oblivious heroes—the Sophists (Judges) raised up by God. They are the moral saviors of the nation—the luminous links joining the era of Joshua to that of Saul.

The Teacher's Lantern. Moses made a tabernacle that pleased God, and served the purposes of a school for years, and made it according to the pattern shown him in the mount. Israel would have made a perfect conquest of Canaan if they had obeyed implicitly their Divine Commander. God's way is not merely the best way. It is the only way. Christians of to-day can no more form a league with evil doers than the Israelites could with the Canaanites. They are to have a true and intimate friendship with the world, but not towards Christ. The trucking, compromising believer is despised. Truth is there is an inviolable antagonism between the Christian religion and the worldly life. The principles, maxims, and precepts of the one strike dead level against those of the other. It is futile to talk of reconciliation. No quarter can be given. It is a war of extermination. Shakespeare's reference to the Bible when he speaks of our vices as the instruments to plague us. The Canaanites, tolerated by a sinful policy, became accretions and poisonous tumors in the sides of the Israelites. Families were fairly torn asunder by inter-marriage, and an interminable intestine strife began. The idol images preserved and the altars built standing in disobedience to the Divine command became so to the worshipers. Man must worship. He is made that way. The institutions of his nature prompt and impel him to worship. It is not a question of worshipping or not worshipping. It is only a question of what he will worship. Some men idolize their own infidelity. . . . From Canaan the putrid streams of heathenism were pumped to the extreme ends of the world. God intended the conquest of Canaan as a deathblow at the heart of heathenism. . . . This paragraph discounts the merely emotional in the "mourner's bench" is followed by a courageous, divinely-directed, persistent conquest of the entire heart for God, its strong crying and tears amount to a standing in the "anger of the Lord" was not a supernatural apparition. It was a prophet, or possibly Phineas. No angel ever addressed an assembly. And the particularity of the account of the place from which he made his approach is so wholly inconsistent with a supernatural apparition. However, the question is matter of speculation. . . . The Lord's Judges then in so-called secular history as well as in sacred. Peter the Hermit, well known to the world, was of Orange, Gustavus Adolphus, Cromwell, Napoleon, Washington, and Lincoln—the Lord raised them up. Consciously or unconsciously they served his purpose. They were indispensable to the evolution of the plan of the God of nations.

The Young People's Devotional Service. Matthew 10:32-39. Who is on the Lord's Side? (Consecration Meeting.) There is something thrilling in a "to the colors." It is so without reference to the accidents of the case. The appeal is to loyalty, courage, fortitude. The answer always makes an inspiring spectacle. On closer analysis, however, in many incidents one must become doubtful of the ethics and justice of the consecration. Still there is always one "call" on which no such suspicion ever rest. It can be answered without fear of shame or defeat at the hands of the engineers. Whoever has Jesus' summons to discipleship sounded clearer than it does to-day. The need of fresh volunteers is imperative. The fidelity of those already in the ranks was more obligatory. Great are the sacrifices, but great also are the gains. He who thinks he is going to preserve his comforts by ignoring the Master's citation will lose them. The life found that way is the lost life.

Finger Prints. Twenty years have elapsed since the discovery of "finger prints" by Francis Galton. The average man does not realize that this method of identification is absolutely unassailable, never having failed when fairly tried. Like ridges have never been found on the fingers of any two persons. Today it is utilized in many odd but useful ways. It is no longer needed to sign documents with the mark of the cross; a finger print is far more positive and absolutely proof against forgery. Banks are already requiring signatures and corporations are beginning to identify employees in this way. Finger prints are taken as signatures to receipts for payment to the workmen constructing the Panama Canal.

Keeping Glue In Condition. The family bottle of glue generally becomes a great nuisance and of little use after it has been opened for a few days. It becomes hardened and impossible to use. It may be softened by heat or by adding a teaspoonful or more of vinegar to the bottle, and allowing it to stand for a few minutes. If the bottle can be kept in a warm place all of the time it will stay soft as long as there is any left.
